My 2-Day Jeju Island Adventure in South Korea

Bing Zhen first time on a road trip (Singaporean, 29)

For our first trip, we travelled around using public transport and found ourselves getting lost, especially at night. Hence, for our second trip to Jeju Island, we decided to rent a car to make our road trip a more fulfilling and relaxing one.

After a short 1 hour domestic flight to Jeju airport from Seoul, we went straight to the Hertz counter desk located next to gate #2 on arrival level with our reservation number.

After this, we took the free shuttle bus which is about 15 minutes-drive away to Jeju Auto house to collect our car.

Once we were there, there was just a 10 minutes verification of documents before we were given an orientation on the car as well as the GPS, which we have requested beforehand to be in English, and we are ready to set off!

Jeju Island is not as small as we see on the map! The airport is located at the north of the island and it is where the Jeju city is, so we stayed in an airbnb near to the airport.

We drove to our first spot - the Jeju Mysterious Road known for objects and liquid appearing to roll and flow up the hill instead of down. At the start point, we stopped our car, put it on neutral gear with hazard lights on, and witnessed ourselves move forward towards the ending point about 300 metres ahead. There was at least 6 cars queuing up to do the same thing! The last stop before we retire for the night was dinner and some shopping at Jeju city.

For Day 2, we drove east to Seongsan Ilchulbong (Sunrise peak) for the sunrise, stopping by for lunch before heading down south towards Daepo Jusangjeolli Cliff and concluded our trip at Jeju's Green Tea O'sulloc Museum where you can admire their green tea plantation and shop at their well-known beauty and skincare brand, Innisfree.

The highlight of the drive was between the attractions because there was no traffic and we found a field of blooming yellow canola flowers. Surprising fact is that there was enough fuel to last the whole day's trip!

For the beauty and skincare lovers, you will be spoilt for choice with the many local beauty brands in Jeju.

Returning the car on Day 3 was a breeze!

We drove to the nearest petrol station to fill up our petrol before returning our car at the return location. The return location is at the same place as where we collected our car. All we needed to do was park at the return point for a 5 minutes inspection and we were off in the shuttle bus back to the Jeju International Airport.

Tips for driving in Jeju Island

- Always book your car in advance
- Google map do not work well in Jeju, hence, having a GPS is important (specifically request for English version during reservation). To use the GPS, you will need to input the last 7 digits telephone number of the destinations.
- Do check with the staff to create bookmarks or put pins to your hotel and rental office on your GPS
- Apply for an International Driving Permit, if necessary.
- Even though Jeju is an island, factor in more travel time between your destinations as it may take you a couple of hours to travel from point to the other.
